

《Memories of Sukhothai》

Source: Thailand in January is like the early autumn of China. The breeze seems to have a chill, and the fallen leaves are also dyed with gray and yellow. The quiet Sukhothai Ruins Park is also less busy on weekdays. It seems that we are here to investigate. Like a chattering visitor. I am afraid to disturb the tranquility at this moment, but like our temples and pagodas in the south of the Yangtze River, they seem to be quietly telling their stories. Even the ruined palaces are solemnly showing their glory. The Sukhothai Ruins Park is a difficult place. A sacred place that hides the mystery of the East, a park that exudes the glorious history of the Sukhothai Dynasty.

Idea: The color of Sukhothai Ruins Park has Chinese artistic elements, which can stimulate the artist's creative desire in the visual and autumn touch. Isn't the gray and yellow color in the black and white image the artistic conception of Chinese ink painting? Aren't the ancient temples, pagodas, and small palace sceneries under the ruined walls exactly the mottled glaze that has been transformed by the kiln at thousands of degrees? Therefore, although the Sukhothai Heritage Park has its own historical and cultural elements, in our opinion, it also has the elements of Chinese culture and art, and is especially suitable for the creation of ceramic art.

Steps: Undoubtedly, after this investigation, the Sukhothai Heritage Park left me a deep image, even an emotional memory. This is also the source of inspiration for me to create "Sukhothai Memories". After brewing, The color of the Sukhothai Ruins Park in my memory gradually turns yellow, and it and the high-temperature color glazes of the four famous porcelains in Jingdezhen gradually become blurred. Therefore, through the method of high-temperature color glaze, I can find my view of Sukhothai Ruins Park in the flat porcelain paintings. This is the conception stage of the creation process; the brushstrokes of Chinese painting and the kiln changes of high-temperature color glaze are the composition and formation stage in the creation process.